■ NIKE (animated narrative scenes)

NIKE-A (CEO PR moment — real factory footage won't show this)

Corporate boardroom, nervous businessman in expensive suit loosens collar, sweating profusely, holding phone to ear. Newspaper visible on desk with damning front page photo. Modern office, cold blue fluorescent lighting. Close up on face – panic behind controlled expression. Dark comedy tone.

NIKE-B (Scale comparison — no real footage for this)

Cinematic shot of a giant brass balance scale in empty black void. One side holds a small Nike shoebox. Other side fills with shadows of larger threats – oil drums, pill bottles, wreckage silhouettes. Scale tips violently to the dark side. Dramatic lighting from below.

■ COCA-COLA (historical + animated scenes)

COKE-A (1880s pharmacy — no real footage exists)

Victorian-era pharmacy interior, 1880s. Bearded man in waistcoat mixes glowing green liquid behind a wooden counter. Amber glass bottles on shelves labeled with old-fashioned handwriting. Warm sepia and amber tones. Oil painting texture. Dust particles in lamplight. Customers waiting behind him look extremely alert.

COKE-B (Scientists paid to lie — can't show with real footage)

Sterile 1960s laboratory. Three scientists in white lab coats with Coca-Cola logo embroidered on pocket. One writes "SUGAR = SAFE" on a chalkboard. Stacks of cash visible on the lab table. Olympic rings poster on the wall. Cold fluorescent lighting. Clinical and dark.

COKE-C (World domination visual — animated concept)

Aerial view of world map. Deep red liquid pours from a single point in America and spreads slowly across every continent like blood on paper. The liquid fills every country. Timeframe indicator at corner. Dark and spreading. Cinematic overhead shot.

✈️ ■ BOEING (boardroom + cover-up scenes)

BOEING-A (Boardroom decision — no real footage)

Corporate boardroom, long conference table, five executives in suits staring at a whiteboard. Two options written in marker: "TRAIN PILOTS = $$$" and "TELL NOBODY = $0". One executive slowly circles the second option with a red marker and smiles. Others nod. Cold, grey lighting. Dark corporate atmosphere.

BOEING-B (Government memo cover-up)

Close-up of an official government document. Critical paragraphs are blacked out with thick redaction bars. A rubber stamp reading APPROVED comes down hard. Hand places document in OUT tray. Coffee mug nearby. Bureaucratic grey office. Cold documentary style.

BOEING-C (Timeline of failures)

Cinematic timeline animation: newspaper headline "CRASH" → large dollar fine text → businessman waving goodbye holding giant check → airplane in sky → airplane door detaching mid-flight → bewildered passenger looking at empty door frame. Each beat 1 second. Dark, matter-of-fact pacing.

BOEING-D (Whistleblower list)

Black screen. Names appear one by one in white text, typewriter style. Next to each name, a red stamp reading DECEASED drops in. Four names total. Each stamp hits with weight. Final frame: all four names, all four stamps. Silence implied. Cold and clinical.

■ NESTLÉ (life cycle + calendar scenes)

NESTLE-A (Life timeline — animated concept)

Split-screen timeline: newborn baby holding formula tin → child unwrapping KitKat → office worker drinking instant coffee → elderly person in hospital bed with feeding tube. Every product clearly Nestlé branded. Dark ironic tone. Each stage 1 second. The circle of corporate life.

NESTLE-B (Deadline keeps moving — animated)

Close-up of a wall calendar. Pages flip rapidly: 2005 → 2008 → 2010 → 2020 → 2025. Each page shows a handwritten deadline crossed out and moved forward. A businessman's hand keeps crossing and rewriting the date, smiling each time. Time-lapse style. Dark comedy timing.

NESTLE-C (10 million deaths statistic)

Black screen. White tally marks begin appearing — groups of five — spreading slowly across the entire frame. They fill every inch. The screen becomes completely covered. Final frame cuts to a single Nestlé annual report cover showing record profits. Side by side. No narration needed.

■ FACEBOOK (expansion + internal memo scenes)

FACEBOOK-A (Global expansion with dark turn)

Satellite view of Earth from space. Facebook logo glows at center and spreads outward like wings across continents. Warm golden light initially. Dark storm clouds visibly build over one region — Southeast Asia. The warm glow dims over that area. Ominous shift in tone.

FACEBOOK-B (Map expansion — shrug moment)

World map on computer screen. Green checkmarks appear country by country. One country lights up with a warning symbol – yellow triangle, exclamation mark. An office worker in a cubicle glances at the warning symbol, shrugs, clicks "EXPAND ANYWAY." The checkmark appears. Map continues.

FACEBOOK-C (Internal memo — rejected)

Close-up of an internal company memo on a bright screen. Text visible: "Fix misinformation = -15% engagement". A hand enters frame holding a red pen, crosses out the line decisively. Below it, same hand writes: "Engagement > Everything". Red REJECTED stamp slams down. Background news headlines blur behind the document.

■ PALANTIR (origin + surveillance scenes)

PALANTIR-A (Company founding after surveillance program)

Government surveillance operation center goes dark – screens shut off, lights cut. Exterior: two figures in shadow walk out of the building carrying briefcases. They immediately open a new office next door. A large check falls from above like a gift from the sky. New logo assembles from data streams on wall.

PALANTIR-B (All-seeing dashboard)

Massive computer monitor showing dozens of simultaneous data feeds: burger supply chains, employee GPS pins, military target coordinates, citizen profiles with photos and financial data. All updating in real time. The viewer's own photo appears briefly in one corner feed. Cold blue tech lighting. Corporate surveillance aesthetic.

PALANTIR-C (Military kill chain UI)

Dark blue military operations interface. GPS coordinates auto-populate. A red targeting reticle locks onto a location. Trajectory calculated automatically. "TARGET CONFIRMED" appears. No human clicks anything – fully automated. Small Palantir logo in corner. Cold, clinical, mechanical. Zero emotion in the interface.

■ PURDUE PHARMA (launch + sales + outcome scenes)

PURDUE-A (1996 launch party)

1990s corporate launch party, ballroom with chandeliers. Executive in tuxedo raises champagne glass at podium. Prescription papers rain from ceiling like confetti – hundreds of them falling. Doctors in the background sign prescriptions without reading them. Slow motion. Dark celebration under warm golden light.

PURDUE-B (Sales rep doctoring data)

Doctor's office. Pharmaceutical sales rep in blazer presents a cheerful poster: "Addiction risk: less than 1%". Gifts and branded items visible on the desk – pens, notepads, golf balls. Doctor nods, takes notes. Both smiling. Warm office lighting. Horror implied beneath the pleasantness.

PURDUE-C (Email vs death toll)

Computer screen showing an email: "Not too bad. Could have been much worse." – R.S. In the background behind the screen, thousands of tally marks slowly fill the wall, spreading wider and taller. Executive sips coffee reading the email, back to the wall of marks, completely unaware. Devastating contrast.

PURDUE-D (McKinsey evil partnership)

Two executives meet in a dark glass boardroom. McKinsey logo on one briefcase, Purdue Pharma logo on the other. They shake hands in front of stacked money. The two company logos slowly merge together forming a superhero team symbol. Both grin. Dramatic lighting from below. Corporate villain aesthetic.

PURDUE-E (Bankruptcy + escape)

Building entrance sign reads BANKRUPT. Front door: bankruptcy notice taped to glass. Back exit: family carries large money bags, loading them into waiting car. A private jet visible at edge of frame. Family waves as they depart. Matter-of-fact tone. Daylight. No guilt visible.

■■ EXXON MOBIL (monopoly + cover-up scenes)

EXXON-A (Standard Oil breaks apart + reassembles)

The Standard Oil logo shatters into fragments – pieces scatter. Pause. The fragments slowly drift back together into a new shape. A new corporate logo assembles from the pieces. Black oil drips down the frame. Dramatic and slow. Industrial color palette – black, silver, oil slick.

EXXON-B (Lab discovery + document shredding)

1970s laboratory – wood paneling, retro equipment. Scientist reads printed research charts, face goes pale. He runs down a corridor to a boardroom. Executives read the same charts in silence. One executive looks up slowly. Long pause. Then: documents fed into a paper shredder. Tight close-up on shredder eating the evidence.

EXXON-C (Climate charts vs public denial)

Split screen: LEFT – Exxon's internal climate projection chart (accurate, alarming upward curve). RIGHT – a New York Times advertisement: "Climate Change: The Science Is Uncertain." Same data. Opposite public messaging. Exxon logo subtly embedded in the ad's fine print. Cold documentary visual.

■ DUTCH EAST INDIA (historical recreation scenes)

DUTCH-A (Spices as treasure — 1600s)

17th century merchant ship interior. Dutch trader in period clothing examines a handful of spices in a beam of golden light – holds them like gemstones. Eyes gleam with desire. Behind him through a porthole: islands visible on the horizon. Oil painting texture. Rich amber and gold tones.

DUTCH-B (Capitalism invented)

17th century Amsterdam boardroom – dark wood, candles, merchant clothing. One merchant draws a diagram on parchment: "Company → Investors → PROFIT = STOCK". Everyone stares. Sudden collective light-bulb realization. Next shot: war fleet immediately departs the harbor. From idea to invasion in 3 seconds.

DUTCH-C (Colonial expansion across map)

Antique map of Southeast Asia. Dutch flags appear one by one, planting across island chains. With each flag, a small flame animation appears beside it. Trade routes glow gold over the map. The ocean between islands darkens as more flags plant. Historical documentary aesthetic.

DUTCH-D (British Empire takeover)

Antique map. British East India Company army depicted as red pieces advancing across India. Opium ships illustrated moving toward China. Company logo quietly replaces itself with a government seal – corporate rebrand as empire. Clean, cold historical infographic style.

■■ DUPONT (discovery + cover-up + legacy scenes)

DUPONT-A (Teflon accidental discovery)

1938 laboratory. Chemist in white coat accidentally knocks over a flask – a shiny, slippery substance spills across the black lab bench. He touches it, surprised. Eyes light up. Jump cut: montage of Teflon pans in every kitchen – America, Europe, Asia. Factory output. Stock charts rising. 5 seconds total.

DUPONT-B (Research buried by executives)

Conference room. Young researcher slides a thick binder across a table to four executives. Executives open it. Page after page of alarming data – animal death charts, cancer correlation graphs, contamination maps. Long silence. The four executives exchange glances. One slowly closes the binder. Ends on closed binder.

DUPONT-C (The speech twist moment)

Executive at podium, speaking confidently. Subtitle appears: "We cannot allow our chemicals to kill people—" The audience in the room leans forward, hopeful. Executive continues – subtitle: "—to interfere with our profitability." The audience visibly slumps. An executive off to the side slides a large money bag into frame. Deadpan.

DUPONT-D (West Virginia farm — complements real footage)

Rural American farm at dusk. Several cattle lying still in a field – clearly unwell. Farmer stands at fence line, staring at an industrial facility visible on the horizon, pipes running toward his land. He holds up a dead bird in one hand. Slow zoom out to show scale of both farm and facility. Somber golden hour light.

DUPONT-E (99% contamination — world reveal)

Dark world map. Countries begin lighting up red – one by one, then faster, then all at once until 99% of the map glows red. Zoom in: close-up of a human arm. Microscopic view of blood – chemical molecule symbols float visibly within it. Pull back to person staring at their own arm. Slow and disturbing.

■ OUTRO

OUTRO-1 (All companies = daily life)

10 company logos arranged in a circle on dark background. Slow zoom in to reveal they're all attached to ordinary products – phone, shoes, coffee cup, airplane ticket, medicine bottle. All surrounding one person in center. Person looks around slowly, then at camera. Trapped in the circle. Cinematic pull back.
